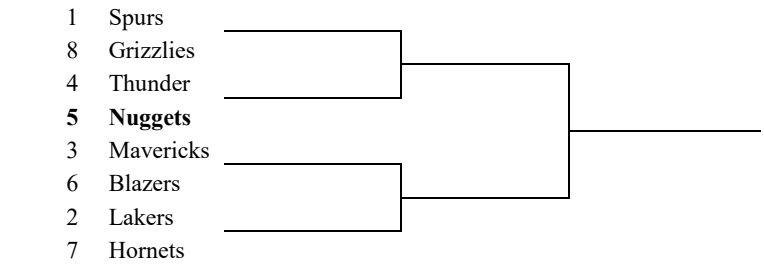
2010-11 GAME NOTES

2011 WESTERN CONFERENCE PLAYOFF BRACKET



FIVE ALIVE

After recording their team-record fourth consecutive 50-win season, the Nuggets (50-32) finished second in the Northwest Division and earned the fifth seed in the 2011 Western Conference playoffs. This marks the first time since joining the NBA that Denver has been the No. 5 seed.

WE MEET AGAIN

Seventeen years after the Nuggets stunned the top-seeded Seattle SuperSonics, the two franchises will finally cross paths again in the playoffs. Denver coach George Karl was on the Sonics bench when the Nuggets rallied from a 2-0 deficit to win the best-of-five series 3-2. The Sonics spent 14 more years in Seattle before moving to Oklahoma City and adopting the Thunder nickname in 2008.

That historic 1994 series marked the last time Denver won a playoff series without having home-court advantage. Denver is 2-1 all-time against the Seattle/Oklahoma City franchise in the playoffs. The Nuggets lost to the Sonics 4-2 in the 1978 Western Conference finals and beat Seattle 3-2 in the first round in 1988.

FAMILIAR TERRITORY

Despite being a relatively young team (average age 25.1), the Nuggets have a respectable amount of collective playoff experience. Four players remain from the Denver squad that reached the 2009 Western Conference finals, and two others – Arron Afflalo and Al Harrington – have reached the conference finals with other teams.

Leading the way for Denver is captain Kenyon Martin, who was a key member of the 2008-09 Nuggets team that finished two wins short of the NBA Finals. Martin has played in 84 career playoff games, and he appeared in back-to-back NBA Finals with the New Jersey Nets in 2002 and 2003. K-Mart has always played well in the postseason, averaging 15 points and 7.5 rebounds, which exceed his career regular-season marks.

Denver's coaching staff also understands what it takes to win in the playoffs. Coach George Karl has taken three teams – Seattle, Milwaukee and Denver – to the conference finals, and he reached the NBA Finals with the SuperSonics in 1996. Assistants Stacey Augmon, Adrian Dantley, Chad Iske and Stacey Augmon were part of the coaching staff during Denver's 2009 playoff run, while assistant Melvin Hunt was a member of the Cleveland coaching staff when the Cavaliers lost to San Antonio in the 2007 NBA Finals. Dantley also appeared in the NBA Finals as a player with Detroit in 1988.

GOLDEN YEARS

Over the last eight years, the Nuggets have won 387 regular-season games – the most during any eight-year span in team history. Denver finished 2010-11 with a 50-32 record, marking their fourth-straight 50-win season. This is the first time in their NBA history that the Nuggets have won 50+ games in four consecutive seasons. The 2010-11 season marks the seventh 50-win season in team history (see right), including the fourth since George Karl took over in 2004-05. Denver went on to win a division title in four of the previous five 50-win seasons.

The Nuggets finished with their fifth-best record since joining the NBA in 1976 (see right).

EIGHT, AND COUNTING

The Nuggets are becoming synonymous with the postseason as they are part of the NBA Playoffs for the eighth consecutive year. Besides Denver, only two other teams in NBA are making their eighth straight postseason appearance since 2003-04 – those being Dallas and San Antonio. The last time the Nuggets earned eight straight playoff berths was from 1981-1990, when Doug Moe coached the Nuggets to a franchise record nine straight postseason appearances.

This also marks the Nuggets eighth straight winning season, which continues the longest streak of non-losing seasons in team history. Prior to this eight-year streak, Denver had twice recorded three straight non-losing seasons (1976-79 and 1987-90), but had never managed more than four straight since joining the NBA in 1976.

SPREADING THE WEALTH

One of the major things that stood out about the new look Nuggets is their scoring balance and that it seemed a different player led the team in scoring each night. In fact, the Nuggets had nine different players pace the team in scoring in their 25 games since the All-Star break.

Furthermore, the Nuggets had eight players averaging double-figures since the All-Star break, more than any other team in the league (Phoenix is second with seven players). The rest of the league has an average of 4.8 players per team averaging 10-plus points per game since the all-star break.

OH WHAT A NIGHT

The Nuggets defeated the Timberwolves 130-106 on 4/9, and set a number of milestones in the process. For starters, the Nuggets drained 19 three-pointers in the contest, setting a new Nuggets franchise record for most threes in a game (was previously 18 on 3/12 vs. Detroit). Coming into the 2010-11 season, the Nuggets' franchise record for threes in a game was 16, which had been done four times in the team's history. This season alone, Denver has made 16-or-more threes on four separate occasions.

But the story of the game was Nuggets guard Ty Lawson, who scored a career-high 37 points and was 10-of-11 (.909) from beyond the arc. Lawson became the first player in NBA history to ever start a game with 10-consecutive made three-pointers. His 10 three-pointers is tied for third most in NBA history (along with six others), and his seven made threes in the third quarter is tied for second most in a quarter in league history.

Additionally, the Nuggets had eight players score 10-plus points, the second time since the All-Star break they have accomplished this. The Nuggets also handed out a season-high 35 assists in the game, 14 of which came from Raymond Felton. Felton's 14 dimes (seven of which led to threes by Lawson and J.R. Smith) sets a new Denver season-high and is the most by a Nugget since Chauncey Billups on 12/2 vs. Toronto (also had 14).

MAGNIFICENT MARCH

The Nuggets experienced an excellent March, going 10-3 overall and 6-0 at home during the month. Five of the Nuggets' 10 wins came against teams with a winning record.

Denver averaged 108.4 ppg while holding their opponents to 95.6 ppg in March. They also outrebounded their opponents 45.0 to 38.0 in their 13 games.

Additionally, their 10 wins came by an average of 18.0 points, while their three losses came by an average of 4.7 points.

With the 10-3 month, the Nuggets have now registered 24 consecutive winning months dating back to March 2007.

THE FUTURE IS BRIGHT

Since Denver's much-publicized trade on February 22, the Nuggets saw major improvements in a number of statistical categories across the board.

The first thing that jumped out was the Nuggets improvement on the defensive end -- while not missing a beat on offense either. Denver allowed only 97.1 points per game in their last 25 contests, compared to giving up 105.2 per game before the trade. In fact, the Nuggets held their opponent to 90-or-fewer points in nine of their final 25 games after doing so only seven times in their previous 57 games.

Denver also hit the boards and outrebounded their opponents 44.4 to 40.1 post-trade, after being outrebounded 41.9 to 40.9 before the trade.

Lastly, the Nuggets created more steals, more points off turnovers and got out on the break at a much more impressive rate. Denver averaged 12.9 fast break points prior to the trade, and bumped that up to 17.2 points off the break since -- which would have been good for fourth in the NBA compared to being ranked 22nd pre-trade.

J.R. ON FIRE

Nuggets guard J.R. Smith lit it up after the All-Star break, particularly from three-point range.

Before the break, Smith was averaging 11.2 points, 3.9 rebounds, 2.1 assists and 1.22 steals while shooting 42.5% (213-501 FG) from the field and 34.2% (63-184 3FG) from three-point range.

In the 25 games after, J.R. is averaging 14.5 points, 4.4 rebounds, 2.5 assists and 1.04 steals while shooting 45.2% (128-283 FG) from the field and 45.5% (61-134 3FG) from long range. His numbers were off the charts from 3/12 thru 3/16, where he averaged 21.3 points on 50% (22-44 FG) shooting from the field and a scorching 58.6% (17-29 3FG) from beyond the arc in those three games.

TY THE STARTER

Nuggets point guard Ty Lawson stepped into the starting role after the departure of Chauncey Billups, and he has not disappointed. Lawson started 31 games this season, including each of the past 25.

Overall, Lawson is averaging a solid 11.7 points, 4.7 assists, 2.6 rebounds and 1.00 steals in 26.3 minutes, but all those numbers have taken substantial jumps when he is in the starting lineup (chart to right).

Additionally, the Nuggets are 22-9 (.710) with Lawson in the starting lineup compared to 27-22 (.551) in the games he has played but come off the bench. Ty has scored 20-plus points 11 times this season (nine coming as a starter), including a career-high 37 (10-11 3FG) vs. Minnesota on 4/9 and a then career-high 28 vs. Oklahoma City on 4/5.

Lawson has also registered the first six 10+ assist games of his career, the first four double-doubles of his career and his first two career 20-point/10-assist games, all within his last 25 games (all starts).

A MODEL OF CONSISTENCY

Over the last four and a half seasons, the Nuggets have been tough to beat…especially tough to beat in consecutive games. With the Lakers' four-game losing streak earlier this season, Denver is now the only team in the NBA to have not suffered a losing streak of 4+ games since the 2006-07 season. Since 2/26/07 to be exact, the Nuggets have played 355 regular season games without losing four in a row. During this stretch, Denver has dropped three straight games – on 11 separate occasions – but never four straight. As a comparison, the Nuggets have registered 21 winning streaks of 4+ games during this 355-game stretch, including three streaks of eight wins in a row.

Suffering consecutive defeats has also been rare for the Nuggets at the Pepsi Center in recent years. Since the start of the 2007-08 season, only twice has Denver dropped back-to-back home games – against Dallas and Philadelphia in 2009-10 (12/27-1/3) and most recently against Utah and Houston this season (2/4-2/7). That's a total of 161 regular season home games with only two sets of consecutive losses among them.

Individual teams haven't had much luck beating the Nuggets in consecutive games lately either. The longest active losing streaks for the Nuggets against a single NBA opponent are currently a mere three games (Philadelphia) and two games (L.A. Clippers).

MAKE YOURSELF AT HOME

It didn't take long for forwards Wilson Chandler and Danilo Gallinari to get comfortable with their roles on their new team. In 21 games (19 starts), Chandler averaged 12.5 ppg and 5.0 rebounds on .419 (101-241) in 30.6 minutes per contest. Gallinari averaged 14.7 ppg and 5.4 rpg in 30.9 mpg in his 14 appearances as a Nugget (12 starts). Chandler scored 10+ points in 14 of his 21 games, including 27 at Utah on 4/13, 20 points and five boards at Orlando on 3/18, 21 points, seven boards and four threes at New Orleans on 3/14 and 20 points, six rebounds and two blocks at Portland on 2/25. Chandler also rejected a career-high six blocks in the win over San Antonio on 3/23 … After a quiet debut (two points), Gallinari exploded for 30 points (15-17 FT) and nine rebounds in the overtime loss to the Trail Blazers on 2/25. He then posted 17 points at Orlando on 3/18 after missing eight straight games, registered 23 points at Miami on 3/19 and scored a team-high 22 at L.A. Lakers on 4/3.

Gallinari's 30-point performance was actually something extremely rare for the Nuggets. The Rooster became only the third player in team history to score 30+ in one of his first two games with the Nuggets – including the first to do so since Orlando Woolridge in 1990-91 (37 in his debut vs. Golden State on 11/2/90). For all you trivia buffs out there, the only other to do so was Walter Davis in his second game with Denver on 11/5/88 at Seattle (33).

While this type of play is nothing new from Chandler and Gallinari, it's refreshing to see them not miss a beat with their new team. On the season, Chandler scored 20+ points 22 times, including one 30+ scoring effort. Gallinari recorded 20+ points 18 times this season (30+ twice), including eight times in his last 24 outings.

A HOMECOURT HAVEN

Nuggets coach George Karl says it again and again to his team: WE MUST WIN OUR HOME GAMES. With one of the best homecourt advantages in the entire NBA, the Nuggets have been taking care of business in recent year. Under Karl's watch, Denver has gone an impressive 201-65 (.756) at the Pepsi Center. The Nuggets have been especially good at home over the last 92 home games, dating back to 2008-09 (see right).

Denver wrapped up this season with a 33-8 record at home, which is currently the second-best home record in the Western Conference. The Nuggets rattled off streaks of 10 straight home wins on two separate occasions (from 2/10-3/30 and from 11/5-12/14), representing their third and fourth home winning streaks of at least 10 consecutive games since George Karl took over the helm midseason in 2004-05.

PREVIOUS 91 HOME GAMES
CATEGORY	STATISTICS
Record	76-15 (.835)
Points Per Game	111.3 (10132)
OPP Points Per Game	99.7 (9073)
FG Percentage	.489 (3625-7418)
3FG Percentage	.377 (693-1838)
Assists Per Game	24.4 (2217)
Average Margin of Victory	13.6

The best opportunity for the Nuggets to pick up home wins is when their opponents are on the second leg of a back-to-back. Playing in Denver the night after a game has proven rough on teams in the past, with the famed Mile High elevation and the fact that Denver International Airport is a mere 24.6 miles away from the nearest team hotel. Fifteen of the Nuggets 41 home games in 2010-11 come against teams on a back-to-back set, with Denver having gone 14-1 in those games. In 2009-10, the Nuggets went 15-3 (.833) at the Pepsi Center against opponents playing under those circumstances.

NENE NOT BACKING DOWN

In his ninth NBA season, Nuggets center Nene put together arguably his best year to date, averaging 14.5 ppg on a career-best .615 FG shooting (first in the NBA) to go along with 7.6 rpg, 2.0 apg, 1.12 spg and 0.97 bpg in his 75 appearances. He also shot .711 FT on the year. Nene scored 20+ points 13 times, registered 14 double-doubles and shot .700+ from the field 20 separate times this season.

Over his final 66 games, Nene was especially dominant against opposing centers. All 13 of his 20+ scoring efforts came during this final 66-game stretch, while he outscored the opposing starting center in 46 of his last 66 games. Additionally, his .618 (360-583) FG shooting over the stretch blew away the combined shooting percentage of the 66 opposing starting centers that he faced (.537 / 294-547).

It's one thing for a player to shoot a career-best from the field; it's an entirely different thing if that player is a career .563 FG shooter that already holds the team record for a single-season percentage (.604 in 2008-09). Nene was the only qualifying player in the NBA to shoot above .600 FG so far this season.

STRAIGHT SHOOTERS

Stat-mongers around the NBA tend to prefer True Shooting Percentage (TSP) as one of the best indicator for how efficient a player is playing in a given season. The TSP formula is somewhat intricate ---- TSP = (PTS x 50) / (FGA + (FTA x 0.44)) / 100 ---- but basically formulates a way to analyze all three shooting categories (FG, 3FG, FT) with a single statistic.

With that being said, the Nuggets were one of the best TSP teams during the 2010-11 season. Among all NBA players, Nene ranked fourth overall (.657), while Arron Afflalo ranked 11th (.620) in the entire league. Among only the players averaging 30+ minutes per game, Nene and Afflalo actually stood first and second in the entire NBA in True Shooting Percentage. As a matter of fact, the Nuggets were the only team in the NBA that featured two players averaging 30+ minutes per game who ranked in the Top-15 for TSP.

TRIPLE-A: AFFLALO'S ATTRIBUTES ASCENDING

In 69 games this season, Nuggets guard Arron Augustin Afflalo looked like much more than just a defensive-minded role player that he was considered last season. He posted 45 double-digit efforts (including three double-doubles) in 69 appearances this year, averaging a career-high 12.6 ppg in the process. He shot .498 FG (35th in the NBA), .423 3FG (T-8th) and .847 FT (T-31st). Although he was 35th in FG shooting, his .498 percentage actually ranked sixth in the NBA among all guards. Afflalo's True Shooting Percentage (.619), which takes all three categories into account, ranked second in the NBA among all players averaging 30+ minutes per game.

Afflalo recorded 10 games with 20+ points already this season (30+ once), after doing so only twice all of last season (in 82 games) and only three career times prior to this year (in 231 games). Included in his 20+ scoring efforts was a career-high 31 points on 11-14 (.786) FG shooting, as well as a 24-point effort vs. Dallas on 2/10 in which he scored 19 in the fourth period and hit the 19-foot game-winning jumper to give Denver the 121-120 win.

CAREER-HIGH COMPARISON
	ENTERING '10-11	2010-11
Scoring	8.8	12.6
Rebounds	3.1	3.7
Assists	1.7	2.4
Blocks	0.37	0.45
Steals	0.56	0.49
Minutes	27.2	33.7
FG Percentage	.465	.498
3FG Percentage	.434	.423
FT Percentage	.817	.847

It's not just scoring that Arron Afflalo improved this season. In 69 appearances, he averaged a career-high in nearly every major statistical category (see right). In addition, his 33.7 minutes per game were the second-most of any player on the team.

BENCHING WEIGHT

One of the main keys to the Nuggets' success this season was their bench play. Denver's bench averaged 37.2 ppg and scored 50-plus points in six of the final 13 games of the year (45.8 ppg during stretch) and outscored their opponents' bench in 49 of the 82 games. In 50 wins this season, the Nuggets outscored the opposition 2011-1768 off the bench (+243). Among all NBA teams, the Nuggets reserves ranked fifth in the league in bench points per game, including third in the Western Conference behind only Phoenix and Dallas.

As expected, J.R. Smith was once again a major contributor for the Nuggets off the bench this season. He averaged 12.3 ppg and 4.1 rpg in 79 games this year (73 off the bench). Smith notched 20 or more points 11 times, which included three straight games doing so as a reserve from 11/28-12/3 (his first time ever doing so) – the first Nuggets player to accomplish this feat since Earl Boykins did so in three consecutive bench appearances from 12/18-12/31/06. Smith has also scored 30-plus off the bench twice, including a season-high 31 vs. Detroit on 3/12 where he connected on a season-high nine three-pointers (a franchise record-tying seven in the fourth quarter).

Another big boost to the Nuggets' bench this season was Al Harrington, averaging 10.5 ppg in 73 games (all but three coming as a reserve). He notched 10+ points in 37 of his 73 games, including six 20+ scoring efforts. Harrington dropped in 27 points off the bench while shooting 75% (8-12 FG) from the field and 83% (5-6 3FG) from long range in the win over the Spurs on 3/23. He also scored a season-high 31 points off the bench at Toronto on 12/10, marking the most points in a non-overtime game by a Nuggets reserve not named J.R. Smith since Earl Boykins on 11/19/04 (32 vs. Chicago). Additionally, Harrington scored double digits in each of the first seven games to become the first Nuggets bench player to do so in the first seven games of a regular season since Boykins in 2005-06.

Denver's bench exploded on numerous occasions this season. They scored 68 points in their win over Golden State on 4/11 (four players with 14+). They erupted again against Detroit on 3/12, scoring 68 points with four players in double-digits in a 131-101 route, and also vs. Phoenix on 11/28, scoring a season-high 70 points in the team's 138-133 home win. Leading the way for the Nuggets in the three above games was J.R. Smith with a season-high 31 vs. Detroit (9-16 3FG), 30 points vs. Phoenix (6-11 3FG) and 22 vs. Golden State (4-9 3FG). Smith now has nine 30+ scoring effort as a Nuggets reserve, which sets a new team record for 30-point performances off the bench (surpassing Kiki Vandeweghe's six).

George Karl
Head Coach

NBA coaching legend George Karl, who signed a contract extension with Denver on March 8, 2011, was introduced as the 19th head coach in Nuggets history on Jan. 27, 2005 and has since overseen one of the most successful eras in team history. In just five-plus seasons, Karl's 328 wins are already the second-most by a coach in Denver's NBA history, while his .617 winning percentage is unmatched. His run of six-straight postseason appearances is the second-longest in Nuggets history to Doug Moe's nine-consecutive (1982-90). Denver joins Dallas and San Antonio as the only NBA teams to have made seven-straight playoff appearances.

The seventh-winningest coach in NBA annals, Karl has amassed 1,036 career wins in his 22-plus seasons in the NBA, including a streak of 18-straight non-losing seasons – third only to Pat Riley (19, 1981-82 to 2001-02) and Phil Jackson (20, 1989-90-present) in NBA history. In fact, of the six other men to have won 1,000+ career games, only three: Jackson, Riley and Jerry Sloan have a better winning percentage. He has also notched 74 career playoff victories, good for 12th all-time. He has earned 10 Coach of the Month honors, which is tied for the fourth-most in NBA history.

Karl's 2009-10 season was cut short because of throat and neck cancer. He made the diagnosis public two days after the All-Star Game but coached the Nuggets for three weeks while going through radiation and chemotherapy treatment. Karl did not return to the bench after a March 16 victory over Washington, and Denver went 7-7 in its final 14 regular-season games and lost to the Utah Jazz in six games during the first round of the playoffs.

Karl has had great success ever since taking the helm of the Nuggets back in 2005. In his first season in Denver, 2004-05, Karl engineered one of the greatest turnarounds in NBA history. When assuming head coaching duties in January, the Nuggets were 17-25 and stood in 11th place in the Western Conference – a full six games out of the playoffs. Karl led the Nuggets to a 32-8 (.800) record and a seventh seed in the postseason, while that winning percentage remains the best in NBA history for a midseason coaching replacement that coached at least 20 games. He was named Western Conference Coach of the Month for February and March and finished fifth in voting for NBA Coach of the Year during the 2004-05 season. In 2005-06, Karl guided an injury-riddled Nuggets team to 44 wins and a Northwest Division title – the club's first division crown since 1987-88. He became the fifth coach in NBA history to lead at least three different teams to division titles (also Milwaukee and Seattle). In 2006-07, Karl led the Nuggets to a 45-37 mark, including a franchise-record 22 road wins. The Nuggets finished with the sixth-best record in the Western Conference - their highest finish since 1988-89 (sixth). In 2007-08, Karl led the Nuggets to the third-highest win total in team history with 50 wins. During the 2008-09 season, Karl guided the Nuggets to arguably the best season in team history. With an overall record of 54-28, Denver claimed the Northwest Division title and tied the team record for most wins in a season. In the 2009 NBA Playoffs, Karl coached the No. 2 seeded Nuggets to their first Western Conference Finals appearance since the 1984-85 season before falling to the eventual NBA Champion Los Angeles Lakers in six games.

Prior to joining the Nuggets, Karl served as head coach for the Milwaukee Bucks (1998-03), the Seattle SuperSonics (1991-98), the Golden State Warriors (1986-88) and the Cleveland Cavaliers (1984-86). During his coaching career, Karl's players have made 27 All-Star appearances, earned 16 All-NBA recognitions, made 11 All-Defensive teams and have won two Defensive Player of the Year awards.
